Success Surprises the Nationals' Mr. Candini

The pitching sensation of the American League, a trimly constructed, black-haired Italian who answers to the name of Milo Candini, stood under a caressing lukewarm shower deep in Yankee Stadium's innards yesterday and said, "I guess I'm the happiest fellow in the world. I've never had anything happen to me like this. Look, I'm trembling all over."

Candini had just walked across the field at Yankee Stadium, the matter of 40 yards or so from the Washington dugout to the steps leading to the Nats' dressing room. En route he had seen virtually every fan in the vast park, some 12,000 people, stand on his feet and cheer him lustily for the convincing manner in which he had stymied their Yankees. It was enough to thrill a seasoned campaigner, some player who had

In Nightcap Costly More than a third of the major eague baseball season has vanished and the astonishing Nats still are stamped as threats to capture New York _______000 000 000 000 the American League pennant. The most astonishing thing about the Nats at the moment would be Pitcher Milo Candini, who has won seven straight games without suffering defeat.

Candini has given the Nats a lift at a time when they were threatening to sag. He has won five successive starts impressively since picking up two victories in relief picking up two victories in relief roles and as a result the Nats still are clinging to second place only two games behind the Yankees.

The latest and most notable of Candini's triumphs was achieved yesterday when he defeated the Yankees, 8-0, in the first game of Sullivan, ss Yankees, 8-0, in the first game of a double-header at New York. He distributed six hits neatly, permitted only one man to reach second base, walked none and struck out five in pitching his second shutout. Ernie Bonham blanked the Nats, 4-0, on seven hits in the second game.

Earned-Run Yield Light. Despite his fashionable pitchinghe has yielded only four earned runs in 491/3 innings—Candini says he still is suffering from arm trouble, but only after pitching a game and then only for a day.

An ailing-armed right-hander washington with Newark last season, when he New York with Newark last season, when he won only four games, Candini declares the improvement in his arm has been tremendous but that it still aches painfully after pitching. Scar's Candini contributed enough hitting to defeat them. He socked an inside-the-park home run over Center Fielder Tuck Stainback's head opening the eighth inning. He also delivered a double in the fourth, in addition to a brace of sacrifices, to spark Washington's 11-hit attack.

Gerald Priddy got the Nats off to 2-run lead in the first inning of the opener when he looped a single to right after Spud Chandler had loaded the bases by walks. The Nats collected two more runs in the second and made it 5-0 for Candini in the third when Ellis Clary singled to score Bob Johnson, who had singled and stolen second. Singles by Johnny Sullivan, George Case and Johnson, plus an error by Chandler, fetched the Nats two runs in the sixth and Candini added the final run with his homer. Stainback, the first man to face Candini, moved as far as third base in the first inning but thereafter the Yankees couldn't get anybody to second. Stainback represented half of the Yankees' attack, incidentally,
